Joseph is a highly skilled director, cinematographer and editor. He is equally at home working with cultural institutions such as the BBC, The British Library, and English Heritage, commercial clients such as L'Oréal and Apple Music, or acclaimed artists such as Cornelia Parker.

Aesthetically he draws upon a photographic background to create sumptuous visual narratives. All his work is shot, lit and edited with photographic attention to detail, and visual gimmickry is avoided. Every effort is made to maximise the potential of subjects and locations, with particular emphasis on creating calm and focused atmospheres for performances and interviews.

TESTIMONIAL

“Joe is a talented filmmaker and DOP. He is calm, focused and has a great eye. He directed a beautifully shot short film recording the making of my project Magna Carta (An Embroidery) for the British Library in 2015. I was happy to work with him again this time as DOP on my recent Election Artist film Left Right & Centre, shot in the House of Commons Chamber of the Palace of Westminster.

Filming in a sensitive location, Joe helped maximise the potential of the situation with a quiet assurance. Working closely with him was a pleasure; he responded to direction very effectively, was willing to work long hours, and was easy to share and develop ideas with.”

TESTIMONIAL

“I’ve worked extensively with Joe since 2012 on a broad range of documentary films for the British Library Learning website. Joe has an excellent eye for composition, and is professional across all aspects of video production.

He is particularly skilled at bringing the best out of interviewees thanks to his flexible, calm and intelligent approach to filmmaking. He is adept at finding creative solutions in complex circumstances, and at capturing aesthetically rich shots in challenging locations. I wouldn’t hesitate to recommend him for future filmmaking projects.”
